Training on Labour Migration Governance in Libya

18-21 September 2023 | Tripoli, Libya

Context: Labour migration to Libya dates to the 1960s, consequent to the high demand for migrant workers generated by the first discoveries of oil and hydrocarbon reserves there. Immigration flows initially originated in the neighboring countries – the Republic of Chad, the Arab Republic of Egypt, the Republic of the Niger and the Republic of Tunisia – and later from African countries further afield.

In the following decades, Libya continued to attract many migrant workers, mostly due to the rise in oil revenues, a set of comprehensive economic and social programmes, as well as shortages of national labour. Libyan migration policies have since played a decisive role in attracting a labour force from abroad and in shaping migration trends and dynamics. Further, migration flows to and across Libya have increasingly assumed a mixed nature, implying mixed origins (several sending countries of origin); mixed drivers (intertwined economic, sociocultural, and political factors, trafficking); and mixed trajectories (long and fragmented journeys, changing profiles).

Presently, the Libyan labour market is shaped by expanding unemployment for nationals on the one hand and growing numbers of foreign migrant workers on the other hand, a paradoxical situation arising from a combination of public-sector dominance of the labour market, skills mismatches and Libyans’ distaste for manual labour. On the demand side, firms continue to experience labour shortages and, despite the ongoing political and economic crisis, migrant labour continues to form a significant part of Libya’s economy, crucial for the (revival of) the country’s economy.

Rationale: In this context, developing coordinated and strategic governance of labour migration has become essential for the country, with “governance” here intended to mean “the combined frameworks of legal norms, laws and regulations, policies and traditions as well as organizational structures (subnational, national, regional and international) and the relevant processes that shape and regulate States’ approaches with regard to [labour] migration in all its forms, addressing rights and responsibilities and promoting international cooperation” (IOM Glossary on Migration, Geneva, 2019).

Training Objectives: A well-managed and sustainable labour migration governance system promotes good governance and effective regulation of labour migration and protects the rights of labour migrants and their families. Considering this, this Training on Labour Migration Governance in Libya seeks to raise awareness among national and local authorities as well as other relevant stakeholders, including civil society organizations in Libya on the benefits of labour migration, the rights of migrant workers and to build their capacity for more effective labour migration management.
